Strider: the Story of a Horse (illustrated)

by Leo Tolstoy

"Kholstomer", also translated as "Strider", is one of the most striking stories in Russian literature. This story prominently features the technique of defamiliarization by adopting the perspective of a horse to expose some of the irrationalities of human conventions. Strider's altruistic life is recounted parallel to that of his selfish and useless owner. At the end of the story Strider dies but his corpse gives birth to a new life - that of wolf cubs.
